Dear Ms. Campbell:

The Select Subcommittee on the Coronavirus Crisis has been conducting investigations into the federal government's response to the coronavirus pandemic. We have sought to better understand what went wrong, identify ways to improve the country's response, and determine what corrective steps are necessary to ensure our nation is better prepared for any future public health crisis. These investigations have revealed, among other failures, that Trump Administration officials engaged in a persistent pattern of political interference in the nation's pandemic response—overruling and bullying our nation's scientists and making decisions that allowed the virus to spread more rapidly in an attempt to advance former President Trump's electoral prospects.¹ In light of the senior position you held at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and your involvement in key events under investigation by the Select Subcommittee, we write today to request documents and a transcribed interview regarding these issues.²

To date, the Select Subcommittee has identified at least 88 instances in which Trump Administration officials injected politics into public health decisions—including attempting to alter, delay, or block the release of scientific reports and guidance on the coronavirus, pressuring public health experts to adopt politically motivated talking points that downplayed the threat of the virus and conflicted with science, and seeking to retaliate against CDC officials who provided truthful information to the public. For instance, the Select Subcommittee has obtained evidence showing that Trump Administration officials promoted policies that would purposely allow the virus to spread in a dangerous attempt to achieve herd immunity without a vaccine, changed the CDC's testing guidance for the explicit purpose of reducing testing while reopening the country, and pursued questionable coronavirus treatments over the objections of scientists. These incidents—many of which occurred while you were at CDC—degraded every major facet of the prior Administration's public health response and severely hindered the country's ability to respond effectively to the pandemic.³

² Select Subcommittee staff have repeatedly attempted to reach you by email and phone, but they have not received any response from you to date.

You have spoken publicly about the political interference you saw as Deputy Chief of Staff to former CDC Director Robert Redfield. After resigning from CDC in August 2020, you recounted to the New York Times how political interference in CDC's work by officials in the Trump White House and political appointees in the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) impacted the pandemic response, stating: “[T]he political involvement, not only from HHS but then the White House, ultimately, that in so many ways hampered what our scientists were able to do.” You also confirmed to the New York Times that you were responsible for helping secure approval for CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report (MMWR) series, and that you witnessed Trump Administration officials meddling in MMWRs for the former President's political benefit, noting: “It wasn't until something was in the MMWR that was in contradiction to what message the White House and HHS were trying to put forward that they became scrutinized.”⁴ You further detailed in an appearance on Meet the Press that during your tenure at CDC, “[w]e did see, more and more often, individuals across the Administration commenting and, on the guidance that the CDC was trying to put out. And, you know, unfortunately, that often led to delays.”⁵

The Select Subcommittee has also obtained new documents regarding your role in specific events actively under investigation. For example, a recently obtained document indicates that you and other top CDC officials—including then-CDC Director Redfield and Dr. Michael Iademarco, Director of CDC's Center for Surveillance, Epidemiology, and Laboratory Services—were contacted by a CDC employee to discuss how to address an email sent by former HHS Senior Advisor Paul Alexander, in which Dr. Alexander called for an “immediate stop on all CDC MMWR reports” to allow him to review and make changes to articles prior to publication.⁶ During a December 7, 2020, transcribed interview of Dr. Charlotte Kent, Chief of the Scientific Publications Branch and Editor-in-Chief of CDC's MMWR series,

Dr. Kent stated that she was instructed to delete this email, and that she understood the direction came from Director Redfield.⁷

Specifically, in her interview, Dr. Kent stated that she received the instruction to delete Dr. Alexander's email on Sunday, August 9, 2020, after Director Redfield and Dr. Iademarco discussed the email earlier that day.⁸ Consistent with Dr. Kent's statements, early in the morning on Sunday, August 9, a CDC official forwarded Dr. Alexander's email to you, Director Redfield, Dr. Iademarco, and other CDC officials, offering "to discuss next steps with you and OD [Office of the Director] leadership (copied) in the morning."⁹ As a member of the Office of the Director leadership team and a recipient of this email, you appear to have firsthand knowledge of this troubling incident, including who may have participated in relevant conversations, whether Director Redfield may have told CDC staff to delete this email, and what steps may have been taken to effectuate such an instruction.

Given the senior position you held at CDC and your active involvement in matters under investigation by the Select Subcommittee, you likely possess material information relevant to the Select Subcommittee's investigation. This may include, but may not be limited to, information on the Trump Administration's early monitoring of and response to the coronavirus; coronavirus testing, treatments, or vaccines; the public health policies pursued by the Trump Administration to combat the coronavirus; consideration of a herd immunity strategy or allowing the virus to spread among any portion of the U.S. population prior to the development and distribution of a vaccine; public messaging related to the coronavirus; the extent and impact of the political interference in public health agencies' work; any effort to delete, conceal, or withhold information, documents, or testimony; data collection practices; or any adverse employment action taken or considered against any employee, official, or contractor of the federal government for actions taken in the course of their employment related to the coronavirus.

Our public health institutions must never be compromised again by decision makers more concerned with politics than keeping Americans safe. It is therefore imperative that the Select Subcommittee's investigations into the prior Administration's response to the pandemic provide full accountings of what occurred. The Select Subcommittee's investigations have raised
